Spring is coming!

Time for Action: Spring Awakenings!

In early spring, MANY plants are just beginning to sprout, so even though there may not be much color, watch for signs of life. Look for shoots, flowers, buds, and other signs of growth. While you're at it, make sure any winter debris is cleared from your garden beds. Learn more about how to care for your perennials during spring and summer.

Time to act: Plan your maintenance now. Spring is when you can get the most bang for the maintenance buck! Be prepared to weed, weed, weed... tiny plants are easier to pull than big ones, so get an early start.

Unwanted plants are small and easy to pull, and the soil is often moist, making weeding easier. There are also some other maintenance activities needed. Assess which areas of your gardens are weed hot spots and which plants are getting enough sunlight!

Time to plan! Make a plan! Decide, when, where and how you are going to care for your habitat over the spring and summer. Do you need to purchase additional plants or materials? Who will be caring for the habitat? Will it need additional watering? Mulching and plants? Who will be caring for the habitat? Will it need additional watering and maintenance?

Weed, weed, weed... tiny plants are easier to pull than big ones, so get an early start. Getting an early start is really doing yourself a favor.

What's new this spring?

Spring blooms. As the weather gets warmer, flowers are everywhere. It is a wonderful sight to see and reminds us that spring is truly on its way! While you're out looking at the flowers, take a moment to stop and smell the roses. And while you're at it, take a look at the weeds. There may be some that need to be removed before they get too big.

Tips for Native Habitats

Seasonal Plant Identification

A Seasonal Newsletter for Native Habitat Owners and Caretakers

In this issue:

- Tips for seasonal plant care
- Information on native plants and their care
- Upcoming events and opportunities to get involved

Spring is a great time to start caring for your native habitat. Make sure you are prepared to take care of your plants. If you are not sure what to do, reach out to a local garden center or nursery for advice. They can help you with the best plants and how to care for them.

Read the VerticalResponse marketing policy.